Kate Claxton and Charles Stevenson will play "Bootle's Baby" and "The Two Or-phans" at the Grand Opera-house during the first half of next week.

There was a fairly good audience at English's last night to see the second performance of "A Royal Pass," by George C. Staley and his company. The usual matines will be given this afternoon and the engagement will close to-night.

Miss Minnie French is playing the part of Innocent Kid in "A Parlor Match," with the Evans and Hoey company, which will begin its engagement at English's Operahouse to-morrow night. Miss French is said to play the character quite as well as Jennie Yeamans, who created it.

The performance at the Park Theater for the balance of the week has been changed, and Miss Goodrich and her company will appear in "Dad's Boy" to-day and to-morrow, instead of "Wanted, a Husband." The latter will be given Friday and Saturday. "Dad's Boy" is a five-act sensational drama, and is said to be a good one.

The sale of seats for the English operatic performance by the Emma Juch company at English's, next week, will begin at the box-office to-morrow morning. ### MATTERS THEY CONSIDERED Commercial Club Directors Hear Good Reports from Active Committees.

Assistance to Be Given the May Festival-An Address to Council Concerning Streets to Be Repaired-Board of Trade.

The regular monthly meeting of the directors of the Commercial Club held yesterday afternoon was well attended. Among the first things brought before them was the claim of the May Musical Festival, John H. Holliday speaking on behalf of the management of that association. He stated that the enterprise was now in such shape that it was thought the club could give material aid in pushing it forward. He believd the matter was entitled to the support of the club, as it was of benefit to the city and served to attract people here. Mr. Holliday further said that while a guarantee fund protected the festival from possible failure, it was deemed important to its perpetuation that this fund should not be drawn upon, and that no deficit should occur to be made good by the guarantors. The assistance asked from the club was that it take charge of an option sale seats, which, it was thought, that body could manage more successfully than lany other in the city. The request was well received, the only objection raised being that, while the project deserved all possible aid, it might establish a precedent on the part of the club to which it could not adhere. After further discussion, however, it was decided that the proposed action was properly within the scope of the club's functions, and, on motion of Mr. Mason, it was ordered that a committee of fifty members of the club, to manage the proposed sale, be President Lilly appointed as a special committee to devise plans for an improved sewerage system Charles B. Fletcher, chairman; Dr. Charles E. Wright and Geo. W. Bender. Reports from several special committees were next considered. Charles E. Coffin, chairman of the committee to investigate the condition of the county jail, reported satisfactory progress, and stated that though time would be required to accomplish the work undertaken, it was thought that before a great while a report of striking interest would be ready for submission.

Other Children and Posterial of the Counting Continuance was referred to honght the matter had been to utilined. The committee on press and printing reported that its first meeting had been held Monday last, and that much important work had been outlined. The committee only it with possible steps it was suggested to the directors additional important matters which to be made the proposed that an auxiliary press committee, to be composed of members of the city department of local papers, be committee. The suggestions were adopted and the committee opportunity to subults suggestions for the club's consideration. The proposed auxiliary committee, it was believed, would be fully as important and beneficial as the regular pressonal stream of the committee of the commi once. The suggestions and report were ap-neglected, and should be attended to at once. The suggestions and report were approved, and the ordinance was referred to the Council, where it will shortly be introduced. The Colonel further reported that he had opened correspondence with a number of cities, with a view to obtaining copies of ordinances for street-cleaning, that preparations might be perfected for extensive work in that line, in addition to the ordinance passed to compel the cleaning of the asphalt streets.

A letter to the Council about street-improvement ordinances was read and approved. It asked that the passage of the ordinance providing for the improvement of certain streets be delayed, that the information afforded by the street-paving exposition might be utilized, and suggested plans for the creation of a greater competition among street-paving companies, both as to prices and systems of paving. The letter will be signed by the president of the club and submitted to the Council at its next meeting. The club will meet next Monday evening, when a general discussion relative to street-paving, in a line of information obtained from the exhibition, will take place.

Tax on Mexican Silver Ore. President Tanner, of the Board of Trade, received, yesterday, a telegram stating that the ways and means committee of Congress had recommended a tax on the Mexican silver-lead ores, and asking that action in opposition to the proposed tax be taken by the Board of Trade here. "These ores," said the sender of the telegram, "are the only articles of value that country can send us in exchange for our manufactures and agricultural products, and form the basis of a reciprocity treaty. The tax, if levied, will defeat this proposed treaty. Our manufacturing industries will be affected by the retaliation of the Mexican government, which will surely follow such action by our government." A meeting for conference on the subject will be held at the Board of Trade at noon to-day, and all manufacturers and others interested in the matter are requested to be present. Manufacturers outside of the city are also asked to communicate with the Board of Trade on the subject, and their views will be forwarded to Washington.

"Yes. I have read the editorial in yesterday's Journal," said Mr. Langsdale, of the Soldiers Monument Commission, yesterday, 'stating that rumors are current that changes have been made, or are on the point of being made, in the original plan, and which will permanently mar, if not destroy, its artistic harmony and effect.

This is altogether erroneous. The commission has taken no action making changes is rapidly regaining his strength and health.

in the original plan, and no commissioner contemplates anything of the kind, as far as I know. We have followed the plans of architect Schmitz strictly. Our ambition has been to build a structure complete in all its parts, architecturally and artistically, and so thoroughly well done as to meet the most exacting demands of those qualified to judge, and which, when it is finished, will be the pride of every Indianian. In saying this, I am sure that I reflect the sentiments of every member of the the board."

THE LOYAL LEGION.

After the Commandery's Business Session It Is Told About Hood's Nashville Campaign.

At the regular-monthly meeting of the Indiana Commandery, Loyal Legion, last night, General McGinnis, in the absence of Gen. Lew Wallace, presided. The first thing done was the appointment of Col. Eli Lilly, Col. Z. A. Smith and Rev. Dr. Haines as a committee to arrange for a celebration of the Fourth of July. It is the intention to have an orator of distinction, not of this city or State, deliver an address upon that occasion in some public place. The oration will be followed by a social and business meeting of the commandery. Messrs. Harry C. Adams, Horace McKay and S. K. Fletcher were appointed a committee to arrange for the May meeting, to which the mem-bers may bring their ladies and friends. The annual election will also take place at that time.

The following candidates were elected last evening to membership: Mahlon D. Manson, late brigadier-general United States Volunteers, Crawfordsville.

Will W. Dougherty, late first lieutenant and adjutant Indiana Volunteer Infantry, now an officer of the United States army.

John Milton Paver, late first lieutenant Fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, Indianapolis.

John Jones Palmer, late brevet major United States Volunteers, Helena, Mont.

James W. Harris, late lieutenant Second Indiana Volunteer Cavalry, Knightstown, Ind.

Captain John E. Cleland then read a paper on "Hood's Campaign," which riveted the attention of the hearers from first to last and was heartily applauded at its close. It concluded with the battle of Nashville, of which the writer said: its close. It concluded with the battle of Nashville, of which the writer said: "Hood's lines extended from Nolinsville pike across the Granny White pike and the Franklin pike, southwestly to the hills south and west of the Hillsboro pike, but with his left reposed along that road. Cheatham's corps was on his right, Stephen Lee's in the center and Stewart's on the left, his salient on Montgomery hill, about eight hundred yards in front of the Union lines. General Thomas's strategy was to induce the belief in Hood that the strongest attack was to be made on the rebel right. Early in the morning of the 15th Steedman moved out through the dense fog, and the ball was opened by a brigade of colored troops, in command of Colonel Morgan, the present Commisssioner of Indian affairs. The fire became general up the line, and as the fog cleared away the great guns in Fort Negley added dignity to the occasion, and Hood found himself, for the first time in one hundred days, on the defensive. Hearts beat high with hope or sunk with fear in Nashville, and people lined the housetops to see the mighty game. All day the wind of battle blew, and night found our flag far out from the city, with Hood still further away on the Brentwood hills, more anxious to save his army than to win a victory. The university of the subsided than to win a victory. The un-easiness at the North subsided and turned to joy; the impatience at Washington abated. The wires now bore messages of congratulation and praise to Thomas instead of entreaty and comto Thomas instead of entreaty and command.

"There had been no uneasiness," continued the speaker, "in the army, and it bivonacked that night in the cold and mud, with the serene assurance that on the coming day it would demolish that gallant rebel army that had fought so bravely at Donelson and Shiloh, at Perryville and Stone River, at Chickamanga and Mission Ridge, at Resaca and New Hope Church, at Kenesaw and Peach Tree Creek, at Atlanta and Jonesboro, at Allatoona and Franklin. All night Hood fortified on Overton Hill, with his flanks protecting his two lines of retreat by the Granny White and Franklin pikes. His artillery was massed at the most effective points, his line about half as long as on the day before. His flanks were stronger than his center, but if Thomas could turn either, or both, it promised better results fin shutty with varying fortune. In the afternoon our artillery poured a converging fire on the rebel batteries, and the practice was magnificent. The gunners seemed to put their shot and shell just where they wanted them with as much accuracy as though they had carried them over by hand. At 4 o'clock, with a resistless sweep, the whole line charged up the hill, and the enemy was routed from every position, demoralized, broken, crushed. The wounded were left to care for themselves, and the dead, to bury their dead. That green slope, the long at the process of the victors and the hurried flight of the vanquished into the universe of the victors and the hurried flight of the vanquished into the universe of the victors and the hurried flight of the vanquished into the hurried flight of the vanquished into the universe of the victors and the hurried flight of the vanquished into the universe of the victors and the hurried flight of the vanquished into the universe of the victors and the hurried flight of the vanquished into the universe of the victors and the hurried flight of the vanquished into the universe of the victors and the process of the victors and the process of the victors and the p smoke slowly drifting up, through the leafless trees, the loud cheers of the victors and the hurried flight of the vanquished into the valley on the other side made a grand and wonderful transformation scene.

"Besides Hood's killed and wounded, and those who quietly went to their homes and forgot to return, there were over 13,000 prisoners, including seven generals, sixteen colonels and officers of lower rank by hundreds, two thousand formal deserters, seventy-two guns, seventy stands of colors,
etc. The loss of life to the victors was comparatively light, owing to the splendid strategy and tactical combinations of the commanding general. It has been said that it was the only case where an army was totally destroyed in the field. It seems eminently proper that a committee should name Nashville as one of the greatest battles of the war." tles of the war.' Col. J. B. Black read the conclusion of his paper on "Sheridan and His Campaigns," the first part of which had been read at a provious meeting. After some time spent in social conversation the meeting adjourned. A List of Disappearances. Yesterday appeared to be a day of disappearances. Sam Taylor, twenty-four years old, it was reported, had left his home, Henderson, a child four years of age, who disappeared from the corner of Washington and New Jersey streets. Bernhardt Harbele, three years old, was reported missing from No. 475 South New Jersey street, while another child of the same age disappeared from No. 175 West New York street. A man who represented that he lived at No. 88 Maple street hired a horse and buggy from Booth's livery stable, Monday afternoon, agreeing to return it at 5 o'clock the same day, but has not since been heard of at the stable.

An Immense Shipment.

That was a beautiful sight on Monday. April 7, on the Lake Erie & Western railroad, between Rochester and Indianapolis -a freight train, consisting of thirty cars, loaded down with Deering binders and mowers, drawn by two engines. The cars were decorated with bunting and flags, and each car bearing the inscription, "Deering Binders and Mowers." Crowds had gathered at stations along the entire route to view the passing pageant, and was the sensation of the season in railroad circles. To conceive of the magnitude of the affair it conceive of the magnitude of the affair it must be remembered that each car will contain sixteen binders or forty mowers. contain sixteen binders or forty mowers. The train was met at the Belt railroad in this city by reporters of the press, and also by Messrs. Marceau & Powers, the well-known photographers, who photographed the train, all of whom were under escort of Mr. J. S. Buck, general agent, located in this city, Indianapolis is made the grand distributing point for this great multitude of farm machinery to the many hundreds of purchasers scattered over the country. Marvellous! is the only word that can describe the success of the Deering Twine Binder and Mower, and is an apt illustration of the trite and truthful expression, the "Survival of the fittest," it having passed all other machines, until now no competitor can compare in excellence, and the Deering's superiority is generally acknowledged. The shipment of a solid train of Deering machines to Indianapolis is an unmistakable evidence of their popularity, and indicates that the Deering company is enjoying an increased trade of their machines in this State.
